Your Honor:

As you know, there was a time in America when Roosevelt had to launch an aggressive campaign against corruption in the corporate world. History has already shown us what happens when industries, because they are monopolies, have too much power. The question is not supposed to be considered on a situation basis, the antitrust laws were made so that, among other reasons, the general public would not and COULD NOT be taken advantage of. Therefore, with all due respect, I don't think that Microsoft should be allowed to abuse antitrust laws.

Thank you sincerely for your time,
